The tree peony is a low, many branched shrub, growing three to four feet high. It has been grown in the Orient for centuries, where it has gained the name "THE KING OF THE FLOWERS". It is beautiful, rare and hardy, and will thrive with very little attention.

Tree peonies should be planted deeply with the lowest bud at least six inches beneath the surface. Deep planting makes for vigorous root systems and bushy plants. They can be planted in either spring or fall, in a good soil fairly rich in humus, in no more than half shade and in a well drained location.

Tree peonies seem to satisfactorily withstand extreme temperatures as well as drought, but in many areas where the temperature becomes very hot it is suggested that the grower experiment with mulching.

We recommend membership in The American Peony Society. Write to Mr.
George W. Peyton, Secretary, Rapidan, Virginia, for further information.
